7. [REDACTED] Attempted to call Tom Korologos, Deputy Assistant to the President for Legislative Affairs, on the Administration's strategy to sustain the Presidential veto of the Freedom of Information Act amendments. In his absence from the city, a message was left for Pat O'Donnell, Special Assistant to the President, to call.

25X1 8. [] Called Max Friedersdorf, Deputy Assistant to the President for Legislative Affairs, who told me that he agrees that the House will override the Freedom of Information Act amendments but that there might be sufficient support in the Senate to sustain the veto or force a compromise on the most objectionable features, although there is some question as to whether some of the support has eroded by the lameduckers who have been defeated and may not be happy with the Administration for that reason. Friedersdorf promised to pass on our concern and willingness to help to Pat O'Donnell, Special Assistant to the President, during Tom Korologos' absence from the city. Friedersdorf also said Korologos had similar feelings that we could do something in the Senate and thought that a contact with Korologos, when he returns early next week, would be beneficial.
